Wokober is a social organisation based in Gulu, northern Uganda. We strive to nurture learners with creative abilities to their full potential as creators, problem solvers and leaders in the contemporary society for a better world. We do this by leveraging the ingenuity of TOY MAKING as an approach to creative learning among children. Northern Uganda has been deeply scarred by the long-running civil war that began in the 1980s. People suffered loss of displacement, loss of lives and property including hardships in access to quality Education for their children.

As a reconstruction effort, we saw an opportunity to restore hope and inspire the next generation through collectively working towards an engaging, relatable and contextually valid Education where imagination, creativity and innovation of the learners is the centre.

We would like to kindly invite you to exhibition booth number B089 as I share these experiences as well as showcase some toys/innovations made by the children, exchange ideas with the experiences Japan and Uganda, all towards an interconnected global village, in solidarity for a sustainable future.
